This course examines the complex, dynamic relationship between communities and the institutions of the justice system in addressing crime and conflict with an emphasis on the challenges and prospects of administering justice within a diverse, multicultural population. The course addresses the role and interplay of race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, social class, culture, and law enforcement. The course examines new strategies, skills, tools, and cultural knowledge necessary for personnel engaged in all aspects of the criminal justice system. Special topics include the impact that terrorism and the need for homeland security have had on the dynamics of police community relations.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- define "community" and its role in the justice system.
• examine concepts of justice and fairness from the perspectives of victims, offenders, community members, and justice system professionals.

• explain and apply the concepts of power, privilege, discrimination, and community justice to the development and administration of the justice system.

• describe how community perceptions of the justice system have been shaped historically by the relations between the system and different cultural groups within the community (e.g., social class, race, gender, religion, disability, sexual orientation, age, etc.).

• analyze the limitations and interrelations of law enforcement personnel in a free society.

• discuss the changing law enforcement agency, including ethnic and racial issues within the workforce and women in law enforcement.

• recognize the impact of cultural diversity on law enforcement, multicultural law enforcement elements in terrorism and homeland security, and response strategies for crimes motivated by hate.

• discuss how law enforcement professionals must resolve these social complexities with a greater need for consideration, sensitivity, and improved communication skills with members of various cultures.

ADMJ 303 Substance Abuse: Effects on Body and Behavior

This course will educate students in drug identification, signs and symptomatology, methods of use, duration of effect, behaviors, addiction, and treatment options. The course examines historical and contemporary perspectives of substance abuse issues, epidemiologic data used to establish the prevalence, incidence, and identity of at risk groups, and trends of substances of abuse and approaches to treatment. This course is especially advised for people who are seeking or working in careers in health, law enforcement, counseling, psychology, business, social services, or teaching. Credit may be earned for either PSYC 405 or ADMJ 303, but not for both.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

• demonstrate an understanding of the anatomy, physiology, and basic chemistry of the nervous system.

• explain the key elements of neural signaling, pharmacokinetics and dynamics, and drug effects on neural communication and on behavior.

• demonstrate familiarity with historical and current substance abuse laws.
define and distinguish between drug addiction, dependence, misuse and abuse, and licit and illicit drugs.

demonstrate an understanding of potential risk factors for use and apply culturally appropriate solutions and/or interventions to various substance using/abusing populations.

examine the influence of culture and diversity on issues related to substance use and abuse as well as political, social, and economic factors involved in supply and demand; recognize, understand, and analyze how substance use and abuse issues are interwoven with economic, social, legal, and political institutions.

define and distinguish among the major categories of drugs in our society (e.g. stimulants, narcotics, hallucinogens) and identify any psychotherapeutic benefits.

describe current options for recovery/treatment from addiction/dependence and resources available at federal, state, and local levels.

ADMJ 304 Juvenile Delinquency

This course is designed to examine juvenile delinquency from a variety of perspectives, including the concept of delinquency, theories of delinquency, social, community, and environmental influences on delinquency, and the juvenile justice system (past and present). An overview of adolescent problems and current approaches being utilized to confront these problems will also be discussed.

The course is designed to examine a variety of the causes of juvenile delinquency, as well as suggestions for the treatment of delinquency at both the state and local levels. This course examines the nature and extent of delinquency with relation to gender differences, family dynamics, peer and gang groups, schools, drug use, and the juvenile justice courts.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- differentiate the many diverse views and perspectives that characterize the study of juvenile delinquency.
- analyze the balance of theory, law, policy, and practice as they relate to juvenile delinquency.
- examine the concept of delinquency and status offending, the measurement of delinquency, and the trends and patterns in the delinquency rate.
- assess the merits of the various theoretical models that have been used to explain the onset of delinquent behavior with a focus on choice, biology, psychology, and economic, cultural, and environmental influences affecting delinquency.
demonstrate an understanding of the various treatment approaches utilized to curb the onset of delinquency.

- examine juvenile delinquency abroad and compare how juvenile justice systems in other nations compare with the system in the United States.

- describe how gender differences, peer groups, family dynamics, schools, and drug use and abuse impact delinquency rates.

ADMJ 315 Pathway to Public Safety Service Careers

| Units: | 3 |
| Hours: | 54 hours LEC |
| Prerequisite: | None. |
| Advisory: | ENGRD 310 and ENGWR 300 or ESLR 310 and ESLW 310 with a grade of "C" or better. |
| Transferable: | CSU |
| General Education: | AA/AS Area III(b) |
| Catalog Date: | January 1, 2020 |

This course is designed for students who are pursuing careers in public safety services. Topics of this course include the history, structure, purpose, and function of federal, state and local government services, as well as characteristics and function of careers that provide services for the well-being and safety to the public. This course examines the values and mission employed by public agencies, and also explores the complex relationship between communities and the institutions and agencies charged with their governance. Lastly, this course provides an overview of the complexity and thoroughness of the pre-employment testing processes involved in testing for jobs in public safety assignments. Emphasis is placed on career readiness, employment and career search techniques, application processes, pre-employment testing, interviews, background investigations, and conditional job offers.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- explain the history, structure, and function of federal, state, and local government public safety and judicial careers.

- discuss the contemporary purpose, structure, and function of federal, state, and local government public safety and judicial careers.

- describe how community perceptions of public safety agencies and systems have been shaped by the relations between the system and different cultural groups within the community (e.g., social class, race, gender, religion, disability, sexual orientation, age, etc.).

- discuss the changing public safety agency, including ethnic and racial issues within the workforce of personnel who have taken an oath to provide safety to the community they serve.

- apply ethical standards both personally and professionally.

- comprehend the complexity and thoroughness of the pre-employment background investigation process, and identify potential career disqualifiers.
- identify the written, physical, medical, psychological, and practical pre-employment testing associated with the various public safety pathways.
- write reports in a clear and logical manner.
- examine career pathway options in the field of public safety services.

| Catalog Date: | January 1, 2020 |

This course is an in-depth study of criminal procedures used to enforce substantive law at both the federal and state level. Every step of the criminal process from arrest to appeal will be thoroughly explored in this course.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify each step in the criminal justice process from the point of arrest to the criminal trial.
- explain each step of the criminal justice process from the point of arrest to the criminal trial.
- analyze the roles played by prosecutors, criminal defense attorneys, and judges in the criminal justice process.
- distinguish the differences between the authority, jurisdiction, and organization of state and federal courts.
ADMJ 323 Legal Aspects of Evidence

This course examines the origins, development, philosophy, and constitutional foundations of the rules of evidence as applied in United States law. Emphasis is placed on the types of evidence and laws governing admissibility of evidence into criminal procedures. Topics covered include search and seizure, hearsay evidence, witness competency, and direct evidence as contrasted to circumstantial evidence.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- distinguish the difference between direct and circumstantial evidence and demonstrate an understanding of the impact that each has on a criminal procedure.
- identify situations where a search warrant is required as opposed to those occasions where an exception to the search warrant rule will suffice.
- analyze the various types of evidence.
- understand the laws governing the admissibility of evidence into criminal procedure.
- analyze the laws of search and seizure.
- evaluate and apply the rules of evidence to specific case facts.

ADMJ 330 Criminal Investigation

This course introduces students to investigative procedures and concepts applied to criminal investigations. Topics include crime scene response, collection and processing of physical evidence, techniques of surveillance, undercover assignments, and interrogation. This course will examine the role of the criminal investigator, legal requirements, search warrants, warrant service, and recognizing exceptions to the search warrant rule.
Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- demonstrate knowledge of critical ethical issues relating to criminal investigations.
- identify the sequential conceptual states in criminal investigation and identify associated activities for each stage.
- demonstrate knowledge of appropriate actions for first responders at crime scenes.
- identify the functions for crime scene investigation and specify the tasks performed in each function.
- analyze interview and interrogation techniques for witnesses and suspects of criminal offenses.
- examine the procedures involved in warrant requests and warrant service.
- define the investigator’s role during the trial process and understand the rules of criminal procedure to include the requirement of proving the elements, categories, and features of crimes in order to initiate prosecutions.

ADMJ 331 Patrol Procedures

| Prerequisite: | None. |
| Advisory: | ENGWR 101 and ENGRD 310 with grades of "C" or better. |
| Transferable: | CSU |
| Catalog Date: | January 1, 2020 |

This course will study the organization of patrol division, types of patrol, and patrol duties. The role of the patrol officer in community relations, crime prevention, ethics, professionalism, and law enforcement will be examined.

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- demonstrate a basic knowledge of patrol division organization in a law enforcement agency.
- explain the rules governing a patrol officer’s conduct.
- differentiate the techniques and methods used by the police to cope with specifics that will be encountered while on patrol.
ADMJ 332 Introduction to Forensic Anthropology

This course is an overview of forensic anthropology, an applied field of physical anthropology. Forensic anthropology uses the analysis of human skeletal remains to answer medico-legal questions. This course emphasizes current techniques used in analysis of human skeletal remains, medico-legal procedures, and the role of the anthropologist in the investigative process. It examines the basics of bone biology, methods of skeletal analysis, and recognition of bone pathology and trauma. Students may earn credit for either ANTH 303 or ADMJ 332 but not for both.

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- describe the methods and approaches of a forensic anthropologist.
- apply the techniques for determining sex, age, and ethnicity from human skeletal remains.
- examine a human skeleton and infer possible trauma and pathology.
- discuss the legal and ethical issues of working with human remains.
- apply the processes for establishing positive identification using human remains.
- explain the role of the forensic anthropologist in a criminal investigation.
- describe the dynamics of dental anthropology in positive identification.
- evaluate the significance of human skeletal remains to overall crime scene investigation.

ADMJ 335 Profiling Terrorism

This course examines the world wide phenomenon known as terrorism. Students will study the social-historical origins of terrorism and the ideologies and philosophies of terrorist groups on a national and international level. Emphasis will be on exploring the law enforcement/intelligence methods utilized to prevent and respond to terrorist-related crime.
Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- compare and contrast the different definitions of terrorism.
- recognize the criminal elements that are necessary to classify a terrorist act as a crime.
- evaluate domestic and international terrorism and develop a basic understanding of the origins and background of both domestic and international terrorism.
- identify law enforcement and intelligence methods to prevent and respond to terrorist incidents.
- describe the modus operandi of various terrorist groups and the law enforcement methods used to investigate terrorist groups.
- assess and propose appropriate interventions to terrorism for current and historical terrorist activities.

This course is designed to provide students with effective job development skills that will assist them in obtaining and keeping an internship or a job in the student's major area. Course content will include understanding the application of education to the workforce; the responsibilities of an internship (where applicable) or a job; completion of Title V Education Code papers (the student’s Application, Learning Objectives, Time sheet, and Evaluations), which document the student’s progress and hours spent at the workplace or internship site; and developing workplace (soft) skills relevant to the 21st century workplace. In addition, the student is required to fulfill 18 hours lecture and 75 hours of related, paid work experience or 60 hours of volunteer work experience for one unit; 75 or 60 hours of related work experience for each additional unit. The program allows the student to combine practical, paid or non-paid work experience with college training. The course may be taken up to four times when there is new or expanded learning on the job for up to 16 units. In addition, the student and the Work Experience instructor may tailor the course to meet the student's specific professional needs by identifying 1-4 workshops, trainings, or conferences that the student may attend as part of the curriculum of the ADMJ 498 class. Only one Work Experience course may be taken per semester.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- apply classroom study through application of planned, supervised on-the-job experience.
- develop practical workplace (soft) skills, acquire knowledge, and build confidence in the workplace.
evaluate himself/herself in the following career and life planning process: self-awareness; career awareness; decision making and goal setting; job search and workplace success; balanced lifestyle.
