

SUSANA HAS A PLAN

Susana Barraza has a plan. She has specifics and a timeline and she radiates full confidence that it will happen. She wants to gain experience in Washington D.C. (where she interned with the Congressional Hispanic Leadership Institute), reach the PhD level, return back home and run for public office.

Susana's plan is especially remarkable because when she graduated from high school (barely), she had no plan at all. She's the eldest in an income insecure immigrant family, and her parents expected her to work after high school. She entertained the idea of community college only because her best friend was going, so she enrolled at SCC.

Susana's ambitions changed when she was selected to attend the Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities' (HACU) Capitol Forum as a SCC representative. Each spring, SCC students at this forum lobby their elected Congressional representatives hoping to shape and promote future legislation that will benefit all students, particularly those in underserved communities. SCC is the only campus in the region to expose students to these opportunities.

"Being able to have access to education has given me opportunities I would have never imagined." —Susana Barraza, former student and current employee with the HSI-STEM Equity and Success Initiative Project

Through education, Susana learned that her heard voice can be heard, and she can advocate for herself, her family and her community. Barraza for Congress? Why not?

GO, PANTHERS!

SCC Panther Ahkello Witherspoon had been a starter for the 49ers for most of the year. He was unfortunately injured and pulled from the first playoff game and did not start the NFC Championship. However, he took over his replacement's spot on Special Teams because he wanted to do whatever he could for the team. When asked about it, Ahkello said:

"[I'm] just doing the next thing, which is going and helping to contribute on special teams ... It's just something I do humbly from the grace of my heart. I believe that type of commitment to your craft and respect for one another will return to you in life. And that's how I operate. That's the way I was raised. That starts at my household. ... If it's not your time, you take the next best role ... helping to commit for the greater good of the team."
